MORGAN ASSAILANT, SUICIDE
LAST NIGHT, PREDICTED
DISASTER TO BOAT.

SHIP OUT OF WIRELESS REACH

Efforts to Reach Saxonia Have Been Fruitless—Holt Broke
Skull In Leap.

(Associated Press)
New York, July 7.—Frank Holt, who shot J. P. Morgan and who placed the bomb in the senate side of the capital building at Washington, lay dead today in an undertaking establishment at Hempstead, while the police had in their possession his trunk containing 134 half-pound sticks of dynamite with which they believe he had planned to wreck the public buildings of New York and other cities.

Leaped to Death.

Holt committed suicide during the night, after an unsuccessful attempt on his life the night before. He leaped from the top of his cell door while his keeper's back was turned last night, and the autopsy revealed that death was due to a fracture of the skull and cerebral hemorrhage which followed the fracture.

Suicide followed closely the discovery of evidence tending to prove that Holt was Enrich Muentner, a former Harvard professor, who was accused of poisoning his wife in 1906.

Dynamite On Steamer.

It is reported that Holt told a detective he had put fifty pounds of dynamite on a vessel which has since left New York. In a letter alleged to have been written to his wife it is said that Holt asserted that either the Saxonia or the Pennsylvania would be destroyed on July 1. The only Pennsylvania in port is a German liner which has been tied up since the beginning of the war.

Try to Locate Dynamite.

Extraordinary efforts are being made by wireless to ascertain whether a portion of a 100-pound shipment of dynamite, sent to Holt at Syosset, L. I., is aboard the Cunard liner Saxonia, which sailed from New York for Liverpool on July 3.

In the letter to his wife Holt wrote, "Steamer leaving New York should sink, God willing, on the seventh. It is the Philadelphia or the Saxonia."

Philadelphia Safe

The American liner, Philadelphia, 611 passengers, was reached by wireless this morning and reported everything all well. She will not steer toward the Saxonia, inasmuch as the latter has not answered the wireless call. However, the Cunard company is not alarmed because no reply has been received from the Saxonia, as she may be out of the wireless range.

Unexploded Bombs

It was learned here today that three ships which reached Havre, France, from New York, last May, were found to have unexploded bombs aboard, placed there before the vessels left New York.

The three vessels on which the bombs were found were laden with automobiles and grain for the allies.

Life Preservers To Be Provided At Bathing Beach

Signs Showing Depth Of Water
At Various Points
Also Set Up

Prof. Eissner is making several minor improvements at the Assembly swimming beach that are calculated to further safeguard the lives of the frequenters of the beach and to prevent, if possible, another such fatal accident as happened there Monday afternoon.

Signs will be posted in prominent positions on the diving piers, telling the depth of the water in various places, and life preservers will be hung in easily accessible places along the beach, with ropes attached, ready to be thrown to swimmers in distress by anyone who happens to be near. This feature will be a big improvement. Mr. Eissner is also manufacturing a set of hooks to be attached to a drag that implements for quick recovery of a body may be at hand.

The swimming beach superintendent received a complete demonstration of the expert use of the city lung motor this morning.

The stroke was seen by Mr. Prindaville, who just had time to run out and flag the milk car, which otherwise would probably have run into the entanglement of wires.

STERLING MAN WAS MURDERED IN RAIL ROAD YARDS TODAY

BERT HOWLAND'S BODY FOUND
NEAR OLD ROUNDHOUSE
AT CLINTON.

STRUCK WITH HEAVY IRON BOLT

Weapon, Covered With Blood, Found
Beside Body—No Clue
To the Crime.

(Special to Telegraph)

Clinton, Ia., July 7.—Bert Howland of Sterling was murdered in the C. & N. W. railroad yards here this afternoon between 12:30 and 1:20 o'clock, his skull having been fractured with a heavy iron bolt, about fourteen inches in length, which was found beside his body. The bolt was covered with blood and hair, showing that it had been used to inflict the fatal blow, back of the right ear.

There is no clue to the murder or the motive, but the authorities are looking for two strangers, who are thought to have been with Howland, and who were last seen going east. Howland was seen about 12:30, and at 1:20 o'clock his body was found near the old roundhouse. His gold watch and money had not been taken.

Left Sterling Saturday.

Sterling, July 7.—Howland, who it is said had been drinking excessively, was last seen in Sterling Saturday, when he went to the home of his employer, A. D. Martin, cement contractor, to care for Martin's horses. At that time Martin told him to go and sober up, and it is stated that Howland said he was going to Clinton.

Whiteside county authorities have been notified and will co-operate with the Iowa officials in an effort to apprehend the two strangers who were seen in Clinton, descriptions of whom have been sent through this territory.

An Illinois Central work train this morning came from Freeport and a big crew started unloading the structural iron for the new bridge to be erected over Rock river in this city. The 60-foot I beams that span the piers are too long for one derrick to handle and a second derrick will be sent here to take them from the cars.

Workmen are putting the curbing around the platform at the south side station and after this is completed the laying of brick for the platform will be started. The carpenters are putting the roof on the covered drive way recently started on the east side of the depot.

COMPTON BOY MADE DELEGATE AT LARGE

FRANK MILLER TO REPRESENT
13TH DISTRICT AT STATE
FAIR SCHOOL

Frank Miller of Compton, who passed the examination for appointment to the Boys' state fair school at Springfield during the state fair, ranking first of the Lee county boys who took the examination, has been appointed as delegate-at-large from the Thirteenth Congressional district by Hon. J. E. Taggart of Freeport, vice president of the Illinois State board of agriculture. The other boys ranking high enough to receive appointment at the school were George Emmert of Franklin Grove and Stanley Thorp of Pawpaw. The indications are that the list will be increased by selecting boys from Lee county to fill out the allotment made to other counties in which vacancies exist. In other years most of these vacancies have been filled by selecting boys in counties from down the state and in close proximity to Springfield.

LUMLEY INGLEDUEW DIED IN CHICAGO

Eight Lee County Boys Are Awarded Free Scholarships

The competitive examination held in this city a few weeks ago of high school graduates for free scholarships in the University of Illinois, was passed by the several boys who took it and they are now all to be rewarded with scholarships which had been allowed counties in which scholars were not awarded. Robert E. Fulton of this city received the scholarship offered Lee county for attaining the highest average in the examination, while Martin Paterman of Franklin Grove received the appointment scholarship through Representative W. L. Leech. Hollis Drew received a scholarship through Representative John P. Devine. The other four boys who have just been notified that they are to receive scholarships assigned to other counties are as follows: Edward T. Howell, the appointment allowed Jackson county; Donald Barry, the one allowed Harding county; Edward J. Haley, the one allowed Clark county; and Everett M. Dollahan, the one allowed Fayette county. Paul W. Byers of this city recently received the appointment to a scholarship in the state agricultural college at Urbana through Abram Ackert, president of the Lee county Farmers' Institute. This now makes eight Lee county boys who will attend the state university the coming year on scholarships awarded on merit, and of this number seven are from Dixon.

SOLDIERS COME TO CAMP DUNNE EARLY SUNDAY

SEVENTH REGIMENT AND HOSPI-TAL CORPS WILL BE FIRST OCCUPANTS.

IDEAL CAMP IS NOW READY

All Arrangements Have Now Been Completed For the Militarymen.

Hambrecht, the Sterling well driller who secured the contract for pumping water for the military encampment at Camp Dunne during the presence of the four regiments, moved his pumping outfit to the camp site yesterday. The gas engine and pump will be tried at once to insure readiness for the first regiment, the Seventh, which arrives Sunday.

There will be no parade of soldiers from the trains to camp, as arrangements have been made to switch cars to the Illinois Central and run them to Camp Dunne. The hospital corps will encamp with the Seventh regiment.

Camp Is Ready.

Captain A. I. Simmons, post quartermaster, has everything ready for the troops. The camp has been laid out, all tents are on the grounds and everything is ready for the arrival of the soldiers Sunday.

Erect War Map

What will interest the national guard war map which is a novel one, different from the old blackboard war maps. The map is located west of the Governor's Hill and is a box 15x5 ft. 10 inches deep, to be filled with sand. At the sides of the box are seats for officers to sit and work out war problems and battles which will be set up by a regular army officer presiding at the map. Seats are arranged in amphitheatre style and will accommodate 60 to 80 officers who will take sides in the miniature battles and will be quizzed by the instructing officer.

The "war" ground is located in one of the most beautiful spots in Camp Dunne, surrounded by large trees to shelter the men from the sun, as the map is built in the open. The feature of the map is the roll seats on which the officers by pushing with their feet can move up and down the sides of the map without using their hands.

Dr. Lincoln Wirt Will Give Two Addresses At Assembly

Lincoln Wirt, explorer, lecturer, author.

Dr. Wirt will appear at the Assembly Aug. 7 and 8. He will give his two great lectures, "The Conquest of the Arctic" and "In the Wake of the War."

Loyal Lincoln Wirt is a native of Michigan. Most of his life has been spent on the Pacific coast. Educated at Jamestown College and Pacific Theological Seminary, he was sent, in 1897, to Alaska as superintendent of Congregational church work. Here he established churches at Nome, Valdez, and Douglas, as well as hospitals and libraries in other places. While thus engaged he was appointed Territorial superintendent of Education by the U. S. Government, founding the public schools which today are the farthest north.

After three years in the Arctic Dr. Wirt spent the seven succeeding years in world-wide travel, largely in the tropics. As guest of King Chulalongkorn of Siam, he sojourned a month at the Siamese court. He traveled extensively in China, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand, and throughout the South Sea Islands, Africa and Europe.

Since his return to America, Dr. Wirt has been in increasing demand as a lecturer.

TELLING STORIES.

Telling stories is a talent which has never yet been fostered or improved by a college or conservatory course.

And yet telling stories is a more valuable accomplishment than the ability to quote Latin or to make a piano shriek for mercy under flank assault.

A man who is so full of Latin that it drips from him in ordinary conversation may be stepped on by the rude world in its hurry. But the man who says, "That reminds me of a story," is always accorded the most polite attention.

Armed with a sample case, a winning smile and nine old stories which are not old enough to need a razor, an American can travel from Maine to California selling goods with both hands and making friends, who will leave a customer pawing over the goods for himself while the crop of stories is being harvested.

One does not need to be an inventor to be a good story-teller. Good memory is sufficient. Many a man who can write articles which will hold the breathless reader until the furnace fire goes out and he freezes in his chair, can't tell a pleasant tale with two paragraphs and a point without getting it snarled up like a ball of yarn. On the other hand, a man who has to borrow a dictionary to tell how to spell a two-cylinder word can tell stories from early morning until his train time without repeating a story, avoiding a grammatical mistake or failing to get a whoop of glee for each tale.

Nobody writes stories anyway. They grow. It is believed that Cain told a couple of his wanderings and that all the rest descended from these. This is why some traveler from foreign lands come home with a bale of photographs and souvenirs while others come home with a stock of stories never uncoiled before in the home town and get invited out to dinner 175 nights in succession.

More quarrels have been headed off by a good story than by the Hague tribunal and many a political candidate who knows enough statesmanship to keep talking for four hours at a stretch has been interred in oblivion by an opponent who bobbed up afterward long enough to tell a story and ask for the loan of a few votes.

Perhaps this is the reason why we are usually in the state of profound dissatisfaction with the men whom we elect.

The Danial Boone Idea in Education

A School System Based on Voluntary Muscular Work

On the outskirts of La Porte, a small manufacturing town in northern Indiana, a group of thirty-five teachers and one hundred and forty boys are making an experiment in education. They live in a perfectly equipped school, located in the heart of an 800-acre farm. These teachers are all "cultured" in the conventional sense of the term; for they are graduates of leading American or European cities. Nearly all the boys are sons of well-to-do parents and have known all possible comforts from their early days. Neither masters nor pupils, however, bear any external signs of a luxurious upbringing. Their khaki trousers, their leather leggings, their flannel shirts, their bronzed faces, their horny hands, their competent stride—all suggest rather the backwoodsman than the cloistered scholar. The average high school boy would probably sniff at the buildings of the Interlaken School, as the institution is called. Many youngsters spend the entire winter in log cabins; others live the year round in tents. The larger dormitories, rustic in their construction, are made of mammoth logs—in their appearance still suggestive, so far as possible, of the forests from which they have sprung.

Like many other modern improvements, the Interlaken School is a protest against accepted ideas in American education. That there is something fundamentally wrong in the present methods of bringing up children is now a settled conviction among thinking people. Perhaps that is due to the fact that life is now a very different thing from what it was fifty or a hundred years ago. Instead of walking we ride in automobiles or trolley cars; instead of cultivating our own food, we have it left at our doors in packages or cans; instead of weaving and making our clothes, as most American families did a hundred years ago, we buy them at stores. All these things mean progress; but every step forward in invention, is also part of the general conspiracy that is being waged by modern industrialism against the individual.

Seventy-five years ago eighty per cent of our Americans lived upon the farm. The boy rose early in the morning and did the "chores." In spring he plowed; in summer he performed his task in open air work on the farm; in the autumn he helped to harvest the crops. In all cases he did real work—purposeful work that added to the world's wealth. Now the great majority of boys live in the town. Poor boys and rich boys spend but a few hours at school, more or less willingly; and when this ordeal is over, they are left to their own devices. The fact cannot be escaped that the country boy is constantly using his hands, while the city boy is not. Most city boys could dispense with their hands altogether, and still perform their customary daily routine duties—except for the purpose of eating and dressing. But the human hand, after all is said and of the school was a primeval wilderness. Early in June, 1910, the Interlaken boys, a hundred and twenty strong invaded this neglected waste, armed with axes, carpenter tools, and above all, youthful enthusiasm for work and new experiences. The school had its inspiration in the principle that boys should regain the unique talent which their grandfathers possessed of doing things for themselves. What more appropriate beginning could they make than that of erecting their own school buildings with their own hands? That spring the boys spent making plans, calculating, estimating material, devising schemes of decoration, and outlining the work. No one was forced to participate; for the school theory is to make the work purely voluntary. The plan was to establish a summer camp on the site of the future school. All who wished to take their vacation in this way, were invited to come—and work. The construction of buildings enough to house 150 boys and teachers in three months was obviously a task even beyond the resources of the militant Interlaken boys. Regular workmen and contractors, therefore, built several of the dormitories. But the biggest and most picturesque the boys designed and constructed themselves. The Interlaken buildings, the visible evidences of the school, by their very history and type of construction thus symbolized the overmastering purposes of the institution—the gospel of mind and character training through work.

The new boy at this school, as at all others, is more than likely to be a specimen representative of the city. Soft in his muscles, a little softer perhaps in his mental processes, absolutely removed thousands of miles from any real human experience, the Interlaken School at first impresses him rather as a punishment than an opportunity.

For a few days the new boy may hold himself aloof. Then a certain sense of discomfort settle down upon him. In his other school experiences he has always found himself looked up to—has always been something of a leader. But here things are not going so well. The boys treat him pleasantly enough; but they do not regard him as a hero. Now, every real boy cares more for the approval of his own boy world than the approval of his parents or relations or teachers. If the boys make heroes of athletes, he will try to become athletic; if scholarly attainments are prized, he will immediately manifest a great interest in his books. At Interlaken, the hero is the boy who has charge of the steam plant, the boy who distinguishes himself above all others at construction work, the boy who is the best farmer. The newcomer quickly perceives that the way to distinction lies in developing calloused hands. His attitude slowly changes. His white color disappears, outing shoes and leggins supplant his once immaculate footgear.

Thus transformed the new boy has little difficulty in accommodating himself to the changed regime. In the morning he rises promptly at 6 o'clock. There are no bells, no whistles, no Chinese gongs, just as there are no rules, no terrifying list of "don'ts." There are only four servants—two Japanese cooks and two helpers—to supply the gastronomic needs of nearly two hundred people. The boys do all the rest of the kitchen work themselves; they lay the tables, serve the food, clear away and wash the dishes. After breakfast they spend half an hour setting their rooms in order. The school employs no chambermaids and no sweeps; the boys make their own beds, sweep out the room and have everything in good order for inspection at 8 o'clock.

The time from eight until twelve thirty is devoted entirely to the class rooms. Here the usual school exercises hold sway. But the teachers impart instruction in an unconventional fashion; they try to relate the old scholarship to the facts of modern life. Formal discipline is lacking. The boys are not assigned to definite seats. They gather in a circle about the teacher, ask and answer questions. A classroom recitation resembles somewhat the conversation of well bred people. In the science classes, the boys, in the main, manufacture their own apparatus.

After one o'clock the situation entirely changes. Leaving the dining hall, the boys gravitate toward a large bulletin board. A hundred eager eyes scan the inscriptions; for here the masters have written down the "assignments" for the afternoon. On the board are written the names of a half dozen boys who are expected to spend the afternoon plowing with two sixty horse-power tractors. Another contingent learns that it is to devote itself to corn, another to sowing cow peas; still another to laying out gardens for raising vegetables. If it is winter time perhaps the ice is to be harvested; if it is summer the hay is to be cut, the garden to be taken care of. The one immutable rule is that all be kept busy and on a farm of eight hundred acres there is plenty of work to keep all of the boys usefully employed.

Every afternoon—from four to six—the boys have plenty of time for play. In spring they crowd the baseball diamonds and tennis courts—their enjoyment not decreased by the fact that they have leveled and staked out these playgrounds by their own labor. In fall there is soccer; in the winter skating and hockey and playing. Every night there are gatherings around the fireplaces in their own and the masters' rooms—for study, reading and conversation. There may be lectures and private theatricals. Occasionally some of the boys decorate one of the halls, invite their girl friends out from La Porte and have a dance. At other times they don their evening clothes and accept invitations to a cotillion in town. For, according to the philosophy that reigns, evening clothes are as essential to a full rounded American citizen as corduroy trousers and a sweater. The school's primary purpose is not to make farmers or carpenters or orchardists, but to make men. Its theory in giving the boys this manual labor is the fundamental idea elaborated at the beginning of this article, that the human mind progresses most satisfactorily along with muscular and hand training. The product at which the school ultimately aims, therefore, is the sympathetic understanding, resourceful, clean living, clean thinking American gentleman.

Facts About the Interlaken School
Fits boys for college and for business, from fifth grade to first year in college.
Its certificate is recognized by western state universities, and it gives thorough preparation for eastern colleges like Harvard and Yale, as well as German gymnasia and universities, under a distinguished Eastern educator (Harvard grad.) as Director of Studies.

Special courses in scientific agriculture and related subjects are offered, with practical experience in the use of all farm tools and the care of cattle. Our 500 acre farm is equipped with modern appliances, such as the electric milking machine, cream separator, gas engines and tractors, etc.

The Lower School
At the age of ten or twelve most boys break loose from their mother's influence and seek a vigorous man's world, with real responsibilities, outdoor employments, and opportunities for leadership.

Yet they still need the home influences, the mothering, which includes attention to mending, laundry, and personal habits.

Neglect to provide responsibilities and duties of a positive and vigorous kind very often causes the naturally developing instinct to wither, and thus are produced our sissy boys.

Interlaken in its lower school provides motherly women who take the young boys under their care and see that they get the sympathy, the personal attention, and the home life their age demands, yet side by side with that is the association with older boys who have learned to do real work, the chance to assume responsibilities, and the vigorous outdoor manly life for which the boy nature craves.

The Upper School
Hand and head must go together if our education is to make normal men, and at Interlaken housebuilding, cabinetmaking, artistic metal work, printing, gardening, pruning and grafting, and the care of animals go side by side with rigorous mental discipline and courses in ancient and foreign languages, mathematics, science, history, and especially practical English and habitual reading of the best books, under teachers of qualifications distinctly above the average.

First, boys learn what it means to do hard manual labor. They like the work because it carries with it the responsibilities of manhood, and boys are eager for responsibility.

The older boys as they show ability for leadership, are placed in charge of groups of younger boys, and they learn most by teaching others. Many of these boys come from homes of wealth and refinement where they are assured opportunities for positions of social and business leadership in later life if they are only qualified to take advantage of them. For the first time specific training for leadership is open to boys of high school age.

Academic work is not sacrificed. Thorough training in Latin, German, mathematics, science, etc., is assured with an academic standard equal to the best in the country. In special cases advanced work equal to the first year in college is available for such as cannot go farther.

Sports
Living in cabins and dormitories on the banks of Silverlake, boys are required to take a dip in the water every morning during the open season, and are permitted to swim every afternoon during the play period of two hours. In winter they skate on the same lake. Soccer, basket ball in a large gymnasium, and base ball have their regular devotees, with well organized teams.

The Director of Athletics examines and tests each boy who enters the school, and recommends special exercises when necessary.

The vigorous outdoor life under the care and suggestion of Dr. Edward Rumely, a medical graduate of Freiberg, Germany, lays the foundation for a rugged health that city boys seldom or never attain, but which adds more to efficiency through life than any other one element.

All boys, even the smallest are taught to swim, row, skate, to take long walks to neighboring lakes and woodland, to know birds, wild animals, and plants, and to camp out and care for themselves.

For further and more detailed information, write for the school catalogue, giving age and some account of the previous school training and future plans of the boy for whom you are interested.

SALTS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys at once when Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of stinging, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

SEVEN KILLED, SEVEN INJURED IN EXPLOSION

Cordite Blows Up Powder Mill in Canada.

Montreal, Quebec, July 7.—An explosion in the plant of the Canadian Explosives company at Beloeil, Quebec, killed seven and injured that many more three seriously. Among the dead is a British government explosives inspector, lent to the company during the war.

A jammed cordite cutting machine caused fire to break out in the plant and several buildings were blown almost to atoms. A government investigation was launched at once.

Four bodies of employees, two of them women, were found in the wreck of the plant late. Three others were still missing, and little hope of their escape was entertained.

The Search for THE BROKEN COIN

WHO searched for it? Why did they search for it? Why did the count want it? Why did Kitty Gray want it? Why did King Michael III want it? Who else wanted it? Why did the others want it? What did the possession of the other half mean to the possessor? What mystifying element entered into the ownership of that precious half of THE BROKEN COIN? Who found it? Where was it found? When was it found? Where was it secreted? Why was it secreted there? All these mystifying questions completely answered in the different episodes of that magnificent serial story of love and adventure, that led to a throne and everlasting happiness. See THE BROKEN COIN every week. It will fascinate you, delight you. Watch and wait for more news.

GERMANY HOLDS UP NOTE TO U. S.

Berlin Asks Informal Exchanges on Subsea Warfare.

WASHINGTON IS NOT AVERSE

It is said State Department sees in attitude of Kaiser to finally accede to demands of U. S.—Latest Request indicates strain between countries is relieving itself.

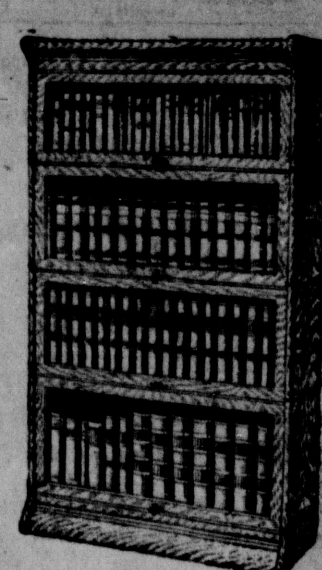

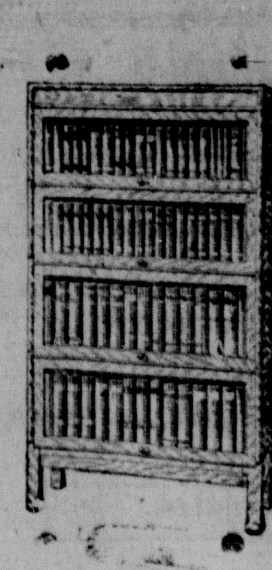

Washington, July 7.—A new turn is given to the German submarine issue when the state department received what amounted to an invitation from the German foreign office to engage in informal exchanges prior to the sending by Germany of her reply to President Wilson's note of June 9. That this move by Germany will result in more talk and more delay is the expectation here. Ever since the submarine issue was raised Germany, according to the view held here, has been desirous of entering upon a lengthy discussion of the case. Such a course at first seemed entirely unacceptable to the United States but recently there have been indications that the administration would not be adverse to further delay and discussion if this gave promise of a more satisfactory result in the end.

The latest invitation came in the form of a message from Ambassador Gerard outlining the German position as explained to him at the foreign office. This message was transmitted to President Wilson at Cornhill. The president himself will dictate what the ambassador will be authorized to reply to the officials of the German foreign office.

Not Unacceptable to U. S.
Although it is admitted that Germany has not responded to the president's request for "prompt action," it is apparent that Germany's move in seeking preliminary exchanges in advance of the sending of her note is not at all displeasing to officials here. It is not understood that the German statement of position promises the granting of President Wilson's demands, but it is felt that informal discussion will make it less likely than ever that there will be a rupture between the two governments. Consequently, even though the exchanges may not result in an actual settlement they are expected to minimize the danger of the situation as regards the friendly relations of the two governments. It is believed, too, that such a discussion may open up all sorts of possibilities and can do no harm, while it may do much good.

It was learned officially that the statement transmitted by Ambassador Gerard containing the proposals on which Germany does not differ radically from other expressions of Germany's views which have been coming out of Berlin for more than two weeks. The conclusion drawn here from evidence now at hand here is that Germany does not desire war with the United States but is determined not to modify or restrict her submarine operations and is endeavoring to strike an attitude which will satisfy this government and at the same time preserve the submarine program intact. As it has been stated here Germany is trying to eat her cake and have it too.

Those who have examined the German proposals have reached the conclusion that so far Germany has failed to hit upon any scheme which satisfies both requirements. This view is shared in official circles. That Germany herself suspects the same thing is believed by many to be demonstrated in her action of trying to sound the United States government on these proposals before submitting them officially in the form of a note.

TRAWLER SINKS SUBMARINE

Report From Paris Says Attempt Will Be Made to Raise It.

Boulogne, France, July 7.—(Via Paris.)—A German submarine was sunk by the government chartered steam trawler Notre Dame de Lourdes, six miles west of Boulogne. The trawler was armed with one three centimeter (1.2 inch) gun on the forward deck. Three shots were fired at the submarine, which sank slowly, leaving on the surface large oil stains and causing air bubbles to rise.

An anchor buoy was left at the spot where the submarine disappeared and an attempt will be made to raise the German craft, as it sank in shallow water.

Plan to attend the Assembly opening day, July 31.

TRADING AT HOME.

In the Retailers' Journal a series of articles has been running entitled "Letters to the Consumers."

In the last of these a general resume of the whole subject is taken up and is of particular interest to the consumers and the retailers of Dixon and every town and village in Lee and surrounding counties.

The article follows:

"Land values grow as productive population increases. Where money is centered in non-resident hands, communities are poor and increased population adds a burden instead of a benefit.

You know as well as we can tell you that a continuation of this centralization of wealth means trouble at some time or other. It cannot go on without pauperizing the common people.

You, Mr. Consumer, are one of the chief sinners. If you continue to pour your money into non-resident corporation or individuals to pay for goods which your home merchants handle, you are a traitor. As Gov. Folk of Missouri said: 'If a place is good enough for a man to live in and make his money in, it is good enough for him to spend his money in.'

This year you have paid these catalogue houses over $300,000,000. The chances are that you didn't get a dollar's worth of goods from them, that by a little attention and patience, you couldn't have gotten from your home merchant.

It is pleasant to save a few cents; it is easy to look at a catalogue and write a postal card. But every time you do it you put a spike in the prosperity of your own community and indirectly affect the value of your own land.

You know that if all the consumers in your section traded at home your town would be prosperous, new enterprises would be created and your land would become more valuable.

Money makes money. Let us suppose an ideal case:

Tributary to your town there are, say, fifty prosperous farms—perhaps a hundred. They sell to the merchants products of a perishable character, shipping away their beef, mutton, hogs and grain. From the merchants of their town they receive money or credit and from the merchants in the larger centers they receive cash for the most profitable part of their products. The income from these hundred or so farms will approximate some hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. If each person, instead of sending away for the goods he needs, buys them at home, the town will be prosperous. Money will be plenty, additions will be built, labor will be attracted which must be housed and fed and paid, streets will be improved, the whole system will feel the force of the money the farmers are spending.

After a time the town will be known as a growing place. Young men will come and marry and work, and rear their children. Year after year the place will improve, stores will grow, concessions will be forced from the railroads, factories will be built, until the village becomes a prosperous city.

The farms nearest become extremely valuable; they are subdivided, and the original owners, once farmers, become capitalists. Farms farther away increase proportionately in value. The circle of the city's influence widens, to take in two hundred farms, each contributing its quota of trade.

Need we point out the other side of the picture? It is for the men who produce wealth to bring it home, not send it abroad. There is nothing that brings better returns than trading at one's own home. If we all did it as far as we can, this whole country would be a garden spot without a strike or a murmur of discontent.

It is for you to make the start. Take it to yourself personally. Advise your neighbors. Discuss it. Think it out."

A GOOD MOVE BY THE GOVERNOR.

One of the best things Governor Dunne has done was to veto the moving picture censor commission bill. The proposal to have the moving pictures filtered through another official body was apparently merely a scheme to provide more berths for jobless citizens and aroused a storm of indignation throughout the state.

A NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITY.

Europeans will have to put a little more "pep" into their war if they expect Americans to pay any more attention to it. If Tex Rickard, or any other good American promoter, was in the Kaiser's boots he would stage a good, lively bout for Labor day, with plenty of ring-side, bomb-proof seats, and he could pay off the war debt.

Having the Fourth of July celebration on the Fifth fooled the weather man. He tried his darndest, but he missed the mark with the rain.

The thousands who visited Dixon from all over this part of the state and from neighboring states, on the Fourth, went home satisfied. Dixon was a hospitable and entertaining hostess.

Dramatic Notes

FAMILY THEATRE.

The third chapter of the Goddess, in two reels, will be shown this evening. This picture is one of the most wonderful ever produced. "A Sister's Blunder," a Kalem drama in two parts, will be shown, and a Hearst-Selig News Pictorial will complete the program.

OPERA HOUSE.

"No Mother to Guide Her" will be the title of the play presented by the Enterprise Stock Co. this evening at the Dixon opera house. The play is a comedy melodrama with an interesting story that is sure to appeal to the patrons of the theatre. There is also lots of good, wholesome comedy during the progress of the play that is put over as only the members of the company know how.

There will be only a few more performances given by these talented people and their many friends will be anxious to see them whenever possible during the balance of their stay.

The pictures for tonight are: "His Nibs the Duke," and "Girl of the Night." The first one is for laughing purposes only. The latter is a two reel human interest drama, with many thrills.

PRINCESS THEATRE.

The Shadowgraph Message, a two reel Broncho drama, will be shown at the Princess tonight. This story is where a deaf and dumb man saves a child's life, starring Howard Hickman and Walter Edwards. The other pictures are The Old Batch, a Reliance drama with Paul Willis and Mildred Harris in leading roles, and an Alwin comedy, The Count, full of life and excitement.

HOLT CRUSHES SKULL IN LEAP

Second Suicide Attempt in Day Proves Successful.

Jerry Ryan, a deputy sheriff, who had been assigned to keep a close watch on Holt, heard a racket at the end of the corridor and ran down to see what was going on among the prisoners in cells there. Holt was lying on his bunk at the time and Ryan thought that he was asleep.

Waited Chance to Kill Himself.

The moment that Ryan disappeared Holt jumped up and shimmied up the bars to the top of his cell. He threw himself forward with great force and landed on the concrete floor in a crumpled heap. The noise of the impact as he struck was heard by Ryan and the deputy ran back to the cell in a hurry. Ryan thought at first that Holt had obtained an explosive of some kind and had tried to blow his brains out and this led to the report that the prisoner had tried to kill himself by bringing his teeth down hard on a percussion cap.

Dr. Cleghorn, the county physician, was quickly called and after examining Holt expressed the opinion that he couldn't possibly survive his injury.

Holt died shortly after his plunge.

Identified Last Year.

Chicago, July 7.—Prof. Gould, a University of Chicago instructor, admitted today that he had identified Holt as Muentner, who was a former pupil at the University of Chicago, while at Cornell last November, but that for several reasons he had decided not to expose him.

Three men have identified Holt as Muentner.

Sensabaugh Expresses Relief.

Dallas, Tex., July 7.—The Rev. Mr. Sensabaugh, Holt's father-in-law, expressed relief after learning of the death of Holt. The news was broken to Mrs. Holt following advice from a physician. Mrs. Holt is prostrated and is being constantly attended by a physician. Holt's remains will most likely be brought to Dallas for burial.

CHAPTER XIII. Under Foreign Rule.

WHAT is happening in Boston? The question stood before the United States, and there was no answer. All communication with it had been annihilated as if by a lightning stroke. Of the 195 American cities with more than 30,000 population twenty-two were in the section that had been lost by the United States. The assessed valuation of those cities alone was more than $2,700,000,000. Ten thousand manufacturing establishments were in the grip of the conqueror.

All the springs of creative work were broken. Shops and manufacturing were open under orders from the military commanders, but the owners and managers did not know what to do. In the banks and trust companies' offices everywhere there were posted placards reading as follows:

Our conquest, having been completed, carries with it absolute ownership of property conquered from the enemy state, including debts as well as personal or real property.

The richest man in New England was on a level with the poorest. However much wealth he might have lying in the banks, he could draw only enough for daily food.

Prominent among the notices that read in Boston town in the reign of Charles I. It was headed:

SEDITION LAW.

1. Every person resident in the territory occupied by the power exercising sovereignty by right of conquest, who shall utter seditious words or speeches or write, publish or circulate seditious libels against the governing authority, or who shall conceal such practices that come to his knowledge shall be punished summarily and severely.

2. Every person who joins a secret society or attends a secret meeting for the purpose of advocating sedition or rebellion shall be punished summarily and severely.

Again the citizens' committee protested. Boston lawyers represented to the military council that American citizens could not be held guilty of sedition or rebellion if they adhered to their country.

"The inhabitants of conquered territory," answered the council, "are citizens of no country. They are under the jurisdiction of the occupying army. But they are not even entitled to the privileges of citizens of the country which controls that army."

"But mere conquest does not entitle you to treat them as rebels," urged the committee. "They are within their rights to preserve their allegiance so long as they do not violate the rules of war by opposing you with arms."

One of the officers smiled. He opened a book. "Once more I must respectfully refer you to your own court decisions," he said, and read from a United States supreme court verdict, "Conquest is a valid title while the victor maintains exclusive territory of the conquered country."

"There is nothing that we can do," the committee reported to the people. It was the refrain that sounded in all the United States just then. To the wild projects for desperate defense that were being broached every day in the city of New York to the frenzied demands that the volunteers in the western camps be rushed into the field, to the curses directed at the American army because it refused to fight, the same answer formulated itself because there was no other. Always, from all quarters, to all demands and imprecations, the only answer that was possible was, "There is nothing that we can do."

The city multitudes surrendered wearily to the situation. But there were men whom the helpless reply drove frantic.

There were hundreds of these men in New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and all the towns eastward from there into Connecticut. They were militiamen who had not been able to join their organizations when they went to the front or whose organizations had been merely paper ones. There were members of sportsmen's clubs, accustomed to the use of heavy caliber firearms and to the trail, and there were many men who were moved simply by the recklessness of courage.

During the days while there drifted through the United States the broken, incomplete, but ever growing story of New England's uprising and its fearful suppression, these men had begun to assemble in Connecticut's country between New Haven and Hartford, urged by no settled plan, but moving to that district simply because it was the last American front between New York and the invading army.

The enemy was moving westward slowly. He had to hold out a mighty screen northward against the American army that now lay beyond the Berkshire hills, holding the land between western Connecticut and Albany. That army, intact and out of his reach, was a constant, acute danger. It endangered his communications, it endangered his base, it endangered his divisions that occupied Boston. It forced him to advance only in continual readiness for battle on flanks and rear lines. Its signal service and aviators kept constant watch of the invading legions. Its range finders located the exact positions of their guns.

During the slow approach the men who had gathered between New Haven and Hartford began to form some sort of an organization. Almost it evolved itself.

From New Haven and Hartford to the factory cities of Wallingford and Meriden, Middletown and New Britain, along the factory lined valleys, there passed a word that gathered workers from shops, idle men from streets. All one long day and all one evening they moved toward the two cities. They seemed aimless enough, but there were leaders who put themselves at their head secretly in the night.

Suddenly they were angry, determined, united bodies of men. Suddenly, like a suddenly awakened wind, they stormed the great arms factories of the two towns.

They came with guns and pistols. They came with crowbars and picks. They came with stones and with nothing except their bare hands. They hauled their dead aside and withered under the fire of the guards and burst through and took the works.

In Hartford they seized a whole train

THE AMERICAN SIGNAL SERVICE AND RANGE FINDERS WERE ACTIVE.

were posted here and in all public places of Boston was the announcement of the institution of the new government. It was:

On and after this date the city of Boston is under the rule of the headquarters staff of this army. The present civil officials of the city will continue their functions. A continuance of existing civil and penal laws and the exercise of legislative, executive and administrative duties are permitted under the sanction and with the participation of the military government.

Had Boston town gone under in flame and terror the very fury of the catastrophe might have carried men through it with less of despair than this cold conquest.

The first pages of all the newspapers were reserved by the military government for its announcements. These were headed:

OFFICIAL! ORDERS AND DECISIONS BY THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS AND THE CITY OF BOSTON.

There were so many of them that there was no room for news on the first pages, even had news been permitted.

Within twenty-four hours the city had been set back to its condition in the seventeenth century when Boston's first newspaper was throttled by a reactionary legislature.

The people of Boston did not know if Connecticut had been conquered. They did not know if New York had fallen. They did not know where their army was or what it was doing. A great battle might be deciding the fate of the entire country, but no whisper reached them.

As in colonial days, they were reduced to such knowledge as might come from rumor or from information whispered by those who learned something by chance.

It was in this way that nearly everybody in Boston came to know that in the statehouse there sat a council, dressed in uniform and bearing military rank, but in reality a council of men learned in international and United States law. Surrounded by great rows of books which they had brought with them, these men were the posses. He demanded for the navy a supply of 10,000 pounds of smoking tobacco, 1,000 pounds of roasted coffee, one ton of rice, 500 pounds of salt and 50,000 pounds of fresh meat. He made requisition for paint, cable, ropes, hose and steel for the ships.

There were requisitions for medical supplies, for cloth and for shoes. To the harassed officials who remonstrated against the hardships that were laid on the city and pointed to the state of its trade, the reply was that it was one of the richest cities in the world and that the levies were modest. When a deputation of citizens pressed the protest the council printed its reply in the "official" columns of the newspapers.

"In regard to the requisitions made by the occupying army," said this statement, "attention is called to the fact that the United States supreme court in the case of New Orleans versus Steamship Company, 20 Wall, 394, decided that the military governing authority 'may do anything to strengthen itself and to weaken the enemy,' and that the court further stated that 'there is no limit to the powers that may be exerted in such cases save those which are found in the laws and usages of war.'"

Despite the cannon that glowered in all the streets Boston's fury at this ironic rejoinder nearly broke through all restraint. In the old city that had the famous tea party among its prized achievements the spirit of that past age awoke again and spread almost without concerted thought or intention. Wherever men could meet they formed in groups to ease their minds by free speech if they could do nothing else. In several quarters of the city there were incipient riots, suppressed by the police only just in time to avoid bloody interference by the soldiers.

"We must curb this town," said the commanding general to the military council in the statehouse. "It is not one to remain coiled for long without repressive measures."

The council nodded. Next morning's newspapers had on their first pages an announcement that made many readers rub their eyes and stare incredulously at the printed page, for on it was such a proclamation as might have been load of rapid fire and machine guns that had been loaded for the American army. In New Haven they took almost 4,000 sporting rifles.

The riot fever spread to Bridgeport. The mob arose and seized the cartridge factories.

It was a mad thing, springing less from purpose than from the insanity that had invaded men's minds. It could have had one end. Yet this army of madmen was moved and molded by a touch of the American ability to "do things"—that very ability on which the people might, indeed, have depended with perfect assurance if only they had not depended on it wholly.

America did truly have men who would fight. They were here, and they were to fight such a fight as would be remembered many a long day. They took hold of men armed with magnificent rifles, but of a score of different patterns for different kinds of sport and demanding a score of different shapes and calibers of cartridges. They took hold of infantry militia fragments whose companies had had only two or three assemblies a year for target practice with average attendance of only eleven or twelve men.

Young doctors took hold with nothing but emergency kits, without ambulances, without litters, without even helpers who would know how to find a wound or apply a first aid bandage. The army of madmen went forward to the Connecticut river to hold the western bank from Hartford to Middletown.

They did not know how to dig trenches; they dug ditches. They did not know how to make defenses for their machine guns; they piled trees that would skewer them with splinters under shell fire or heaped up rocks that would fly into fragments and kill like shrapnel.

That day along the Connecticut river they showed what America's men could have done had they learned how to do it in advance and had they been armed for the work.

SCHOFIELD HOTEL AND COTTAGES
This popular resort is almost as well known as the Dells. It has been entertaining summer guests for forty years, and has lately been enlarged in capacity by the erection of a large modern building, fully equipped with every modern convenience, and affording dining room, assembly parlors, etc. This is an addition to the popular cottage plan, and adds to the previous popular attractions of the older system. The hotel and cottages are in extensive grounds, delightfully shaded by large oaks, and being away from the river is most especially desirable for families with children. The location is in the edge of Kilbourn on a pretty resident street, but a pleasant walk from the river and depot, and with regular free bus and carriage service to these points. The large hotel is not surpassed in this locality in point of modern style and comfort. The annex cottages and grounds make it altogether everything that anybody would desire. The test of efficiency is in the table. This hotel is especially noted for its excellent table board. Fresh butter, eggs, vegetables and fruit are supplied daily from the farm, and its preparation by a professional chef is perfect; chicken dinners twice a week.

BERLIN REPORTS
RUSS LINE SPLIT

Teutons Claim Capture of Warsaw Is Near.

PETROGRAD ADMITS REVERSE

Terrific Artillery Attack by Austro-Germans Drives Czar's Troops From Karsnik Position—Russ Statement Says That Advance of Mackensen Has Been Checked.

Berlin, July 7.—"The Russian line near Krasnik has been broken in two," said a dispatch received here. "One part is being driven eastward and the other toward Lublin and Ivangorod. Warsaw is now threatened by the Austro-German advance." Mackensen's troops are hotly pursuing the Russians south of Lublin, according to reports received here. The Slav commanders are hurrying their best troops against the Austro-Germans in vain efforts to stop the rush through southeastern Poland. An enormous number of prisoners has been taken by Mackensen.

Bring Up Naval Guns. Between the Pruth and Dniester the Slavs have made desperate attempts to break through the Austro-German front. Russian prisoners report that naval guns and heavy howitzers from Slav fortresses have been dismounted and hurled to the firing line.

The afternoon's statement from the war office reported that German troops operating in North Poland stormed and captured a strongly fortified forest, taking 500 prisoners, but gave no new details of the battle south of Lublin. The victory occurred south of Blale Bloto, west of the Suwalki-Kalvaria road.

Russ Admit Retirement. Petrograd, July 7.—By a terrific bombardment of the Slav trenches, General Mackensen has won a victory in the first stages of the great battle south of Lublin, the war office admits.

From Krasnik, eastward to the Wieprz river, the Russians have been forced to retire on a thirty-eight mile front. All day Sunday the Austro-Germans shelled the Slav trenches, hurling hundreds of thousands of projectiles and blowing out whole sections of earthworks. When these positions were no longer tenable the Russians retired upon new defensive positions less than twenty miles from Lublin.

Mackensen's right end, however, was checked and thrown back by the Russians. Between the Wieprz river and the Bug all Austro-German attacks were beaten back with heavy losses. In one narrow sector between Krylof and Sokal, fifty-eight miles north of Lemberg, the Russians took several hundred prisoners.

COOMBS SUFFERS COLLAPSE

Recurrence of Ailment Which Put Him Out of Game in 1911.

New York, July 7.—During the fourth inning of the first game between the Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Dodgers Pitcher Jack Coombs of the Brooklyn team collapsed as he was about to pitch to Smith of the Braves and had to be carried off the field. It appeared that Coombs was suffering a recurrence of the injury which he suffered during the world's series of 1911.

If this latest injury is a recurrence of the former trouble it is likely to bring Coombs' baseball career to an end. He was just making a successful comeback after being out of the game for two seasons and was regarded as one of Manager Robinson's winning pitchers.

Chicago Labor Official Shot.

Chicago, July 7.—Charles H. Johnston, financial secretary of the brick-makers' union, was called from his home at 2230 Kennilworth avenue and shot by a mysterious assailant. He is at St. Francis Hospital, Evanston, and is not expected to live. He says he has no idea of the identity of the man who shot him or his motive.

Fifth Spy Trial Opens in London.

London, July 7.—The fifth big spy trial since the war began opened here when a man known to the government as Robert Rosenthal, aged twenty-four, was arraigned at Middlesex Guild hall. The prisoner is charged with supplying military information to Germany.

Goes Home Alone and Suicides.

Herrin, Ill., July 7.—Mrs. Gustav Dellera shot and killed herself in her home because her husband would not leave a picnic party and return home with her. Dellera returned home at midnight and stumbled over his wife's body.

Nemo Leitold Sold to Comiskey.

St. Louis, Mo., July 7.—Outfielder Nemo Leitold, formerly of the Cleveland club, is now a member of Rowland's White Sox. He came to the Sox via the waiver route and will join the team in Chicago Friday and play left field in the opening game against Washington.

The Telegraph has employed the services of Geo. Murray as country circulator. John Thome still retains his position as solicitor and circulator for this paper.

HEARD IN DIXON

HOW BAD BACKS HAVE BEEN MADE STRONG—KIDNEY PILLS CORRECTED.

All over Dixon you hear it. Doan's Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Dixon people are telling about it—telling of bad backs made sound again. You can believe the testimony of your own townspeople. They tell it for the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or the passages are painful, scanty or off color, use Doan's Kidney pills, the remedy that has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Dixon citizen's advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you.

Mrs. M. Y. Cox, 614 Van Buren avenue, Dixon, says: "I had a dull heavy ache in the small of my back and it was painful for me to straighten up again. I also had headaches and frequent dizzy spells. I used only one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they removed the trouble."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Cox had. Foster-Millburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

HAIR IS TURNING
GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Don't look old! Try Grandmother's recipe to darken and beautify faded, lifeless hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

Ex Premier Giolitti Makes Speech Urging Italians to Rally to King.

Rome, July 7.—Ex-Premier Giolitti, who preceded Premier Salandra, and was forced from office because of his opposition to Italian intervention, delivered a stirring and patriotic speech while presiding at the provincial council at Cuneo, in which he invited all Italians to rally to the king and to the government in the struggle. He declared that the future of Italy depends upon the unanimous support of the government by the people of the country.

No better proof of the entire unity of the Italian people could be found than this declaration, coming as it does from the leader of the party which opposed intervention.

SUSPECT DAUGHTER IN BRUTAL MURDER

Parental Objection to Marriage Believed to Be Cause.

Noblesville, Ind., July 7.—Affidavits were filed against Miss Inez Burk, sixteen, and Frank Taylor, seventeen, charging them with the murder of Mrs. Archie McLain, the girl's mother. So far the young couple have escaped arrest.

Mrs. McLain died at the local hospital following injuries in a brutal assault, the details of which are yet to be explained. Neighbors were attracted to Mrs. McLain's home by screams and when they opened the door they found Mrs. McLain lying on the floor with blood streaming from several wounds in her forehead and on her cheeks. She had been struck with a blunt instrument immediately above the eyes, which fractured the skull. There were also several long gashes cut on her cheeks. On the floor beside the woman was found an axe, two pocket knives and a paring knife, which was covered with blood.

Taylor had been keeping company with Miss Burk for several months and insisted on marrying her, but the mother objected repeatedly. It is agreed that they have made their escape from the city.
